AND SO IT WILL BE.

The tobacco raisers and local dealers must abide the ipse dixit of a great trust. Until now, there has been some competition and the product has been forced to the neighborhood of its worth, but now that is all over and the great combination now formed will proceed to work the masses to the interests of the few. The Republicans have discovered the mess they are in by their combination fostering laws and since it is the people that may speak soon they are coming out with resolutions declaring they will do a better part by them if they will continue them in power; but the people are not to be fooled all the time. Here is the tobacco status.

The American tobacco Company and its great English competitors, Ogdens (Limited) and the Imperial Tobacco Company, have called a halt to their war of competition. All three will be merged into the British-American Tobacco Company, but with the proviso that the American branch will control the trade of the United States and Cuba, and the British branch will control the trade of the British Isles. The great combination will work as a unit in securing the remainder of the world's trade.

FOR PENSIONING.

John G. White, Republican candidate for Congress, is credited with the statement that he favors pensioning the Confederate soldiers and would labor to that end if the people would elect him over Hopkins. Such a promise is as far from redemption as the editor's promise to pay $1,000,000 tomorrow. If he was in good faith his Republican brethren would laugh him to scorn.

Though the war of the States has been over nearly forty years, we continue to pay war expenses called pensions at the rate $137,504,269 annually. If the United States would only shoot and then give up the gun, it would not be so hard on the fellows that work and pay government expenses.

MR. HILL ON COMPETITION.

Mr. James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, in his address at St. Paul, expressed the opinion that if five or ten good enterprises are put together there is nothing bad in the whole mass. This might be true if the purpose of the combination remained the same as that which guided the good enterprises. But if, on the other hand, the combination should be made for the purpose of creating a monopoly, then the new element might make the combination hurtful. The transportation of products is a good purpose, but a combination of lines for the purpose of exacting excessive rates is objectionable.

On the whole, however, Mr. Hill's remarks are worthy of attention. His inquiry what sort of Congress we should have if all the business of the country were turned over to it affords food for much serious reflection. We have had a good deal of experience as to how Congress transacts, or fails to transact the business which necessarily devolves upon it. To give it exclusive control of all corporations, without limitations of how this control should be exercised, would be a guarantee that Congress would "do business" as Mr. Hill says, but it would not be the sort of business wanted by the country. What Mr. Hill evidently means by this is that it would inaugurate an era of corruption compared with which all that we have had in the past would be a negligible quantity.

But before he closed his remarks, Mr. Hill gave illustration which is very eloquent in its bearing on trusts. He found his efforts to reduce rates in grain nullified by the elevator charges at Buffalo. He did not want to go into the elevator business at Buffalo, but he had to do it in order to keep the other elevators from overcharging. The result of the competition which he inaugurated was that charges were reduced from one and one-half cents to half a cent. That is to say, the monopoly rate was 150 per cent. above that which was fixed by free competition.

This shows that Mr. Hill understands the effect of competition in cases where his own interests are concerned. Now, all this discussion of trusts grows out of the war on competition. It began against foreign competition, and was called by the attractive name of protection. It was justified on the ground that it would build up domestic competition to a corresponding extent, and so reduce prices. But when foreign competition had been virtually annulled, the next step was to throttle domestic competition. The obvious remedy is to change the laws under which competition on the products of monopolies has been destroyed.—Courier-Journal.

AETER THE PRESIDENT.

President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railway Company, in an address took strong ground against President Roosevelt's theory, national control of the trusts. He claimed that if there was no harm in the enterprises that there "is no bad" in merging them.

The President may be sure he is up against two warring elements, the trusts and their friends in his own party, and if he is not mighty careful, he will be weighted to more than he can carry. Populistic in this, he is not sufficiently Populistic in all doctrines to gain party influence, and hence it may be he can control only a part of the Republican forces and would not be strong enough to overcome the opposition in his own ranks. If he means what he says, and we think he does, the President has a fight on sure.

NO IMMEDIATE DANGER.

The people of this great government deeply sympathize with their leader in his affliction and rejoice in the statement sent out by his surgeons that his condition is good and he will soon be a well man. They performed a second operation on the President, cutting into the small cavity in his leg and exposing the bone, which was found to be slightly affected. The operation was performed by Dr. Rixey, assisted by Dr. Lung. Dr. Newton M. Shaffer, a New York bone specialist, was called in for consultation. It is said that there is no occasion for alarm as to the President's condition, and it is believed that the operation performed will hasten his complete recovery.

MORE RAILROADS.

There is a feeling on the part of the citizens of Mt. Sterling for another railroad. They want a competing line. In order to have this they must go down into their pockets deep and put up the stuff that will induce roads this way. The right of way secured and a bonus raised to be used in the building of depots would be a consideration, but there must be more than this. Right of way and money to build depots would count for nothing unless we can show paying freights in and out of Mt. Sterling. We can do this big. In presenting an offer it must go this way if we would expect capital invested for mutual benefits.

A DEVIL WANTED.

A LARGE BROWN BEAR.

Hunters Say He Weighed Over Eight Hundred Pounds When Alive.

For several years a large brown bear has been living off the finest and best kids on the Harlan goat ranch, between Sheet Iron and St. John peaks of the Coast Range mountains in Glenn county, and recently a party composed of A. T. Luttrell, W. T. Brown and Chris and Helm Harlan, of the ranch, started out with a pack of imported hounds, determined to find the bear, says the San Francisco Chronicle.

Just at the ravine which marks the dividing line between the two great peaks above named the dogs brought him to bay. He was in the brush, so the men could not see him. Both the Harlan boys went into the brush, and he made for them, striking one of them such a terrific blow as to knock him down and tear most of his clothes from his body, but fortunately he got away. The bear then got hold of the other Harlan boy, but the dogs piled in on the bear so that he got away without being badly hurt. About this time a third party got into the thicket and put five shots into the bear's body, and the animal ran. In the fight at this place he killed four dogs. They followed him about half a mile and found him dead.

This is perhaps the largest brown bear ever killed in these mountains, as, when dressed, he weighed over 600 pounds. Old hunters say the weight was over 800 pounds when alive.

DONALD COMPLIED.

Scottish Gamekeeper Gave a High Character to the Shooting Grounds.

A gentleman having an estate in the Highlands, as he was going abroad for some time, advertised the shootings to let, and told his gamekeeper, Donald, who was to show the ground, to give it a good character to anyone who called to see it.

An Englishman came down, and, inquiring of Donald as to how it was stocked with game, first asked if it had any deer.

Donald's reply was: "Thousands of them."

"Any grouse?"

"Thousands of them, too."

"Any partridges?"

"Thousands of them, too."

"Any woodcock?"

"Thousands of them, too."

The Englishman, thinking Donald was drawing the long bow, asked if there were any gorillas. Donald drew himself up.

"Well, they are no' so plentiful; they jist come occasionally, noo and again, like yourself!"—London Tit-Bits.
